Dear Sir:

I have watched and enjoyed your Fox show Tiny Toon Adventures. My friends (listed above) and I have even started a Tiny Toon Fan Club at our school.

Getting directly to the point, I have learned to draw some of the characters from the show. Together with Sarah Creef and Amy Crosby, I have come up with the enclosed storybooks. We would like your opinion of them.

However, when I saw the October 26th episode of Tiny Toon Adventures, I wondered if I should have bothered even sending this in, seeing that, in that episode, Buster and company go to Europe. Even so, I hope you will spare some of your time to look over these.

To give you a little background, it is summer, and some of the residents of Acme Acres have decided to take vacations. Buster and Babs decide to go to Hawaii, but their trip doesn't turn out as planned.

Some other things that also need explanation, Ms. Coffey, mentioned in the credits of Part Three, is our English teacher. (We are 13 and in the eighth grade.) Once, when she was explaining gender to us, she looked around at the entire class and said, "By the way, gender has nothing to do with sexual preference." While we laughed hysterically, she stood there and wondered what was going on.

Mr. Aylor (mentioned on the first page of Part Four,) was my seventh-grade history teacher. He has a reputation of being the most boring person in the world...or at least the continental U.S.

Anyway, we would like to thank you for taking time to read this. Oh, and by the way, please tell everyone at Fox that it is our favorite network. We think that anyone who doesn't receive Fox is being gyped out of a lot of good shows.

Sincerely,

Renee Carter, Sarah Creef,
Amy Crosby

it's because I had to take these things to school because everyone begged to read them. Renee
